

not exceeding fifty dollars, by such court martial as the case may require.

738. When any company officer who hath given bond as hereinbefore provided shall quit his company, he shall be released upon a new one being given and approved as aforesaid to the commanding officer of the regiment by his successor, with the other commissioned officers of the company, which bond shall be given within ten days after such successor's acceptance of his commission; Provided, it shall appear by the receipts taken as aforesaid, or otherwise, that such arms or accoutrements are then held by the company, and thereupon the officer failing to give such new bond shall be liable to be fined a sum not exceeding fifty dollars, by such court martial as the case may require.

739. Such new bonds shall, under the like penalties, be given by the officers aforesaid, if it shall afterwards appear that such arms or accoutrements are in the regiment or are held by the company, as the case may be, or for such part thereof as may so appear; for which part a release shall be given by endorsement on the bond previously given for the same.

740. The non-commissioned officers and privates of each company in whose hands such arms or accoutrements shall be left as aforesaid, shall, for suffering the same or any part thereof to be out of order, be liable to be fined not exceeding ten dollars, in the discretion of such court martial as the case may require; and the commanding officer of such company shall under the like penalty, to be imposed in the discretion of such court martial as the case may require, at any parade examine the condition of the arms and accoutrements, and report all violations of this provision to such court martial as he shall appoint for the purpose.

741. The commanding officer of each regiment may provide and establish a secure and convenient place of deposit for the public arms and accoutrements held by his regiment, and may, if he deem it proper and necessary, order said arms and accoutrements to be returned to said place after such review and parade, or when taken out on any other occasion, and it shall be the duty of the quarter master of the regiment to attend to the receipt and delivery of the same, and to take charge of and cause them to be kept in good order, the expenses whereof, when approved by the commanding officer, shall be paid out of the fines of the regiment; and if any quarter master shall neglect or refuse to
